

Future perfect (Nivel B2)

Use:

- Use the future perfect to talk about an event that will be finished and complete before a specified time in the future.

This time next week, I'll will have finished this project.

Phrases often seen with this use of the future continuous include:

By ..., This time next week..., In __ years' time...; when + present simple; by the time + present simple.

When you arrive, I'll have prepared the dinner.

By the time I get home, my mum will probably have tidied the house.

- The future perfect is also use to make predictions about future events that will be complete before a specified future time.

Do you think Mel will have eaten all the chocolate cake?

No, she won't have done that!

Form:

Make the future continuous this way:

Positive and Negative

|                                       |                         |                 |
|---------------------------------------|-------------------------|-----------------|
| Iyouhe / she itwethey | will havewon't have | past participle |
|---------------------------------------|-------------------------|-----------------|

Questions

|               |                                       |      |                  |
|---------------|---------------------------------------|------|------------------|
| WillWon't | Iyouhe / she itwethey | have | past participle? |
|---------------|---------------------------------------|------|------------------|

Be going to is rarely used to make the future perfect tense.

Tom's going to have finished his lecture by the time we get there.

Tomado de: https://www.examenglish.com/grammar/future\_perfect.htm